Beautiful day for a cruise

Belle of Cincinnati passengers snap photos and wave at a tow of barges during a lunch excursion on Wednesday from the Henderson riverfront. The paddle-wheeler was stopped for about 10 minutes near Henderson Island to allow barge traffic to clear the channel.

Belle of Cincinnati offers 'highfalutin' trip

The atmosphere was festive Wednesday at noon when the Belle of Cincinnati riverboat and its crew took a load of passengers for a two-hour lunch cruise from the downtown Henderson riverfront.

A table full of "Red Hat Ladies" all decked out in their flashy purple and red attire commandeered a table in one of the dining rooms.

Another passenger walked to the bow of the third deck, assumed the "Titanic" pose and announced "I'm the king of the river."

John and Jeanie Burke used the lunch outing to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. John used to work on the river, so it also was a homecoming of sorts for him.

"I saw it mentioned in the paper and noticed that it was on our anniversary so I decided we just had to go," Jeanie said. "Fall is my favorite time of year, and what better way to spend the day?"

Carson Cowan and his daughter Charly Pate and granddaughter Camber, 4, were having fun after making a spontaneous decision Wednesday morning to jump on board.

It was sort of a surprise for the 4-year-old, who really liked the boat ride "for the first 1 ½ hours," her grandfather reported.

Pate said that Camber's school bus driver often drives his passengers by the riverfront when riverboats are docked, and the little girl has become interested in seeing them.

Susie Givens said when she saw that the Belle of Cincinnati was coming to town for a Fall Foliage Tour that also included lunch or dinner excursions from Owensboro

Billy Hedel, right of Evansville, talks to Dorene "Tobi" Loesch, also of Evansville, about the things they could see along the river from their spot on the bow of the second deck. Loesch, who grew up on the Mississippi River and hadn't been on a riverboat for many years, was celebrating her 80th birthday with the lunch cruise.

UMWA sues Peabody

Demands retiree benefits

The United Mine Workers of America has filed a class-action lawsuit against Peabody Energy Corp., accusing the coal mining giant of having created the now-bankrupt Patriot Coal Corp. as a means of shedding its responsibilities for paying health and pension benefits for thousands of former miners in the Tri-state and Appalachia.

Among them are retirees and their spouses from the former Peabody Coal Co. Camp Complex in Union County that once employed as many as 1,500 miners.

In all, the UMW fears that the retirement benefits for more than 10,000 retirees, active miners and spouses could be jeopardized now that Patriot is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization.

In their lawsuit, the UMW along with eight individual union miners are asking that Peabody Energy, Peabody Holding Co. and Arch Coal Inc., all based in St. Louis, be held responsible for funding the retirees' benefit plans at current levels.

Peabody Energy spun off Patriot Coal as a separate company in 2007. The new company includes four mines in western Kentucky — the Patriot surface mine and the re-

Gleaner staff

Local candidates in the Nov. 6 election will face off this evening in the auditorium of Henderson County High School as part of a debate sponsored by the Henderson Chamber of Commerce's Public Policy Committee.

The debate is free and open to the public and will run from 6 to 8 p.m.

Candidates in the Henderson City Commission, District 5 Henderson County Board of Education, District 11 State Representative and District 7 State Representative races have been invited to participate.

Mike Freels, director of Murray State University's Henderson regional campus and a member of the Public Policy Committee, will serve as the event's moderator. Freels will be assisted by a three-person panel that will ask questions of the candidates.

The panelists will be Lin Shannon, an attorney with Fine & Hatfield, who is the incoming chairman of the chamber's board of directors; David Dixon, editor of The Gleaner; and Lorna Littrell, co-owner and chief financial officer of Sunrise Tool & Die and SunRon International.

State tax reform panel rejects food levy

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT – A panel appointed by the governor to study tax reform in Kentucky has rejected a proposal to tax food at grocery stores.

The idea was unpopular with the 17-member Blue Ribbon Commission of Tax Reform, which dismissed it as a burden on the poor. Consultants said a 6 percent tax could generate about $500 million each year.

"It's off the board," said Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson, who serves as chairman of the panel.

The Courier-Journal reports the commission met for nearly four hours Tuesday to shorten a list of 96 recommendations.

Members also voted to reject several other proposals, including ones that would raise the coal severance tax rate, remove the property tax on airplanes and give a tax credit to people who home-school.

"I think we've made progress, we've taken many items off the board," Abramson said. " ... And I think we're beginning to see recommendations on the income tax and corporate taxes come into view."

However, he said major decisions have yet to be made as the panel comes close to a Nov. 15 deadline to produce a final report. It has only one meeting — on Nov. 8 — before the deadline. Abramson said he may ask to have the deadline extended.

Beshear tasked the panel in February with coming up with a simpler tax code that would generate enough revenue to meet state needs.

After eliminating about 12 proposals on Tuesday, the commission discussed the individual income tax.

John Williams, chairman of Computer Services Inc. in Paducah, said he thought an income tax approach similar to Indiana's should be considered.

HCC speaker discusses Hispanic life, heritage

Carlos Earhart speaks on "Understanding the Hispanic Culture" at Henderson Community College Wednesday as part of their Hispanic Heritage Month observance.

Carlos Earhart hasn't led a storybook life. His father was an alcoholic. His 13-month-old sister died. He picked cotton and shined shoes as a child to make money.

But through it all, he's worked hard, served in the military and now manages property in Owensboro and Hopkinsville. He's also used his Spanish speaking skills to substitute teach, work as an interpreter in hospitals, and to minister to inmates at the Daviess County Detention Center.

Growing up in the southern part of Texas, near Mexico, also gave him a good sense of what life is like for Latinos and others in that area who are heavily influenced by Mexico.

"The Mexican culture is a hardworking culture ... very, very dedicated," he said.

He said a lot of Mexicans come to the United States so that they are able to put a bathroom in their house, or so they are able to put concrete down in place of a dirt floor.

"Or they are able to just provide some money so when their children get into middle school, they'll be able to continue their education," he said, adding that uniforms and books cost money and are not provided in Mexico.

He said it's rare for Mexican and Central American workers who come to the School spending questioned in audit

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT – A state auditor's review of Mason County schools found nearly $200,000 in expenses during the past four years that the review said seemed excessive, lacked oversight or documentation or had no clear business purpose.

Among the items detailed in the audit report are meals at upscale steakhouses by school board members and administrators and also bills for expensive hotel stays.

Auditor Adam Edelen said in a statement Wednesday that with parents buying school supplies as well as cleaning supplies for school districts, teachers buying products out of their own pockets and tax bills not falling, the findings are "shameful."

Teens accused of killing girl showed two sides

The Associated Press

CLAYTON, N.J. – Something struck Toni Fiorella whenever she would see a mother from her hometown drop two teenage sons off at the laundromat to do the family's wash. She didn't know them by name, but they were always respectful. Their mother must be on to something, Fiorella thought.

"It's good," she said. "She's making them responsible."

Now, authorities say, those same boys are accused of killing a 12-year-old neighborhood girl and stuffing her body into a recycling bin near their home. Authorities say she was lured with the promise of new parts for the beloved bicycle she was riding before she disappeared.

Some of the 8,000 residents of Clayton saw the boys as Fiorella did, many others as troublesome teens with reputations for stealing bikes. But even some of those who saw a lawless side of the 15- and 17-year-old brothers have a hard time imagining them committing such a violent crime.

Sixteen-year-old Na'eem Williams, who described himself as a close friend of the 15-year-old, said that he knew the brothers to take bicycles but that it was a leap to think them capable of a horrendous crime.

"I know they didn't do nothing like that," he said. "I know they couldn't, especially not with a young girl."

Authorities have not discussed a motive and have not released the names of the brothers because they are charged as juveniles. The Associated Press is withholding them for the same reason.

GOP candidates disavow rape remark

By Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney disavowed Senate candidate Richard Mourdock's comment that when a woman becomes pregnant during a rape "that's something God intended," but stood by his endorsement of the Indiana Republican.

Republicans in competitive Senate races as well as other GOP lawmakers quickly distanced themselves from Mourdock's remark that came just as polls showed Romney and the GOP cutting into President Barack Obama's substantial advantage with female voters. The Obama campaign and other Democrats called on Romney to withdraw his endorsement for Mourdock and pull his ad now airing in Indiana on behalf of the Senate candidate.

The Romney campaign made it clear it was standing with Mourdock and signaled the ad would continue to run.

"Governor Romney disagrees with Richard Mourdock, and Mr. Mourdock's comments do not reflect Governor Romney's views," said spokeswoman Andrea Saul. "We disagree on the policy regarding exceptions for rape and incest but still support him."

The Obama campaign said the president found Mourdock's comments "outrageous and demeaning to women" and said the assertions were "a reminder that a Republican Congress working with a Republican President Mitt Romney would feel that women should not be able to make choices about their own health care."

Said spokeswoman Jen Psaki: "It is perplexing that he wouldn't demand to have that ad taken down."

The National Republican Senatorial Committee stood by Mourdock, but GOP Sen. Kelly Ayotte of New Hampshire canceled a planned trip to campaign with the candidate Wednesday and issued a statement saying she disagreed with him. Rep. Mike Pence, who is running for governor in Indiana, also rejected the comment and urged Mourdock to apologize.

On Tuesday night, Mourdock was asked during the closing minutes of a debate whether abortion should be allowed in cases of rape or incest.

"I struggled with it myself for a long time, but I came to realize that life is that gift from God. And, I think, even when life begins in that horrible situation of rape, that it is something that God intended to happen," Mourdock said.

The state treasurer, who unseated six-term Sen. Richard Lugar in the GOP primary, is locked in a close race with Rep. Joe Donnelly.

After the debate, he sought to clarify his comments, issuing a statement saying, "God creates life, and that was my point. God does not want rape, and by no means was I suggesting that he does. Rape is a horrible thing, and for anyone to twist my words otherwise is absurd and sick."

Mourdock's comment recalled GOP Senate candidate Todd Akin's remark this summer about rape and pregnancy. Akin said in an August interview that women's bodies have ways of preventing pregnancy in cases of "legitimate rape." Republicans, led by Romney, called for Akin to abandon the race, but he refused and is pressing ahead against Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill.

It was unclear whether the self-inflicted political wounds by Mourdock and Akin decide their elections on Nov. 6 in Republican-leaning states. But the comments are clearly problematic for candidates like Brown, who is struggling to hold onto his seat against Democrat Elizabeth Warren.

"It's not what I believe," Brown said following a campaign appearance in Boston. "I am a pro-choice Republican and that's not what I believe and I disagree with what he said."

Asked if he still supported Mourdock's candidacy, Brown replied: "Listen, it's up to the people of Indiana, certainly."

Former Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson, who faces Rep. Tammy Baldwin in their competitive Senate race, called Mourdock's comments "really sad."

"I've got a wife and two daughters and six granddaughters," he said in an interview. "Anything dealing with rape against women is uncalled for. Period. No tolerance whatsoever."

In Nevada, Republican Sen. Dean Heller also disagreed with the comments from Mourdock. Heller is in a close race with Democrat Shelley Berkley.

Tehran sends mixed signals on nuke work

Like the U.S. Congress, Iran has pushed its most pressing national problem until after the Nov. 6 presidential elections. Unlike Congress, Iran is indicating that it is then willing to sit down and deal.

Signals coming out of Tehran are conflicting, perhaps intentionally so. The New York Times reported late last week that the U.S. and Iran had agreed in principle to one-on-one talks about Tehran's uranium enrichment program, which, if it hasn't already, is apparently close to producing weapons-grade uranium.

Iran says the uranium is needed for peaceful purposes, its medical research and electric power reactors, but this talk has been belied by its bellicose rhetoric toward Israel.

And that rhetoric has prompted the Western nations — the so-called P5 plus one, the five members of the U.N. Security Council plus Russia — to impose new and stricter sanctions that have led to a near total collapse in the value of Iranian currency and a huge crimp in its oil exports.

YOUR TURN

Do you have an opinion on these or other issues? Send your letters to Editor, The Gleaner, Box 4, Henderson, KY 42419 or email them to letters@thegleaner.com. Letters must be signed and include a phone number for verification.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has called for preemptive strikes, preferably with the U.S. in tow, against Iran's nuclear facilities.

He has not found many takers, and now has pushed the deadline for the world to react until next summer, which post-election would give Iran and the West time to work out an agreement. The most important ingredient may be to devise a face-saving way for Tehran to bow out of the nuclear-weapons business.

In the meantime, Iran has threatened an all-out retaliation against Israel and U.S. interests in the Mideast if it is attacked.

The reprisals would likely also involve Iranian surrogates like Hezbollah in Lebanon and Hamas in Gaza, both of which have grown weaker because of the loss of Iranian patronage, funneled through Syria.

Iran's leaders are acutely aware that it took only a few days for U.S. air power to reduce Iraq, a nation Iran fought to an inconclusive draw after an eight-year war, to a third-rate power.

Something is clearly afoot in the Iranian leadership.

Its noisy, embarrassing and anti-West president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, has unceremoniously been shoved to the sidelines.

And Tehran now insists it never broke off talks with the West. To hear Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei tell it, his negotiators are standing by, ready to get right back to serious bargaining once the U.S. elections are over.

How President Barack Obama or a very green President Mitt Romney handles this ambiguous opening from Iran will do much to set the direction of our Mideast policy for the next four years.

Romney displays unusual strategy

MARTIN SCHRAM
COLUMNIST

Back in his first campaign confrontation with President Barack Obama, Mitt Romney showed he knew how to win a debate. Monday night he showed he knew how to lose a debate — in the hopes of winning the presidency.

That clearly was the secret strategy of the Republican nominee from the moment he walked onstage for the third and final debate of what had been so far a contentious, confrontational campaign.

Time after time in the debate at Lynn University, in Boca Raton, Fla., Romney seemed to endorse Obama's most controversial policies, ranging from the use of drones to kill terrorist leaders to completing the troop withdrawal from Afghanistan by 2014. Joe Biden could hardly have done better.

For liberals it was a night of unrequited joy. But somewhat less thrilled was Brent Bozell, the arch-conservative founder and president of the Media Research Center. Less than an hour into the debate, Bozell tweeted an alert to his faithful followers: "Something is wrong with Romney tonight. He's refusing to challenge Obama's failed policies. He's sounding LIKE Obama. This is terrible."

And when the debate was over, cable TV's talking heads instantly and overwhelmingly informed viewers Obama "won" the debate. Won big-time. My cable news colleagues even spent (see also: wasted) many thousands of dollars on instant polls that said the same thing — with numbers, which meant it must be true.

Time out. Why is it that, as sure as a patient's leg kick follows a doctor's knee tap, media decision-makers and reporters reflexively ask the wrong question after debates?

They cover debates like they were covering Olympic fencing, where every touch is a score that counts and total points produce the winner. But political debates aren't about seeing who won — they are about discovering which candidate viewers would vote for if they had to cast their ballot immediately after the debate.

Obama's strong and combative debate performance no doubt solidified many Americans' vote preferences. Obama repeatedly nailed Romney for his ever-changing positions, foreign and domestic.

But Romney wasn't really talking to the vast majority of debate viewers Monday night, just a tiny fraction of them. Romney wasn't trying to impress the almost 90 percent of voters who have already decided how they will vote. His strategy was clearly just to convince those who are still undecided — and actually, not even most of them.

Romney tried throughout the debate to make himself seem appealing and palatable to the undecided females who reside in America's suburbs. These women may well prove to be the swing voters who can decide the outcome of the still-in-doubt states — especially Ohio, which is crucial to Republican hopes.

Think about it. They are still undecided because they have already made one crucial decision: They really aren't satisfied with the candidate they know best, Obama. They want something more, something better. Or at least something different.

In the first debate, Romney passed their first key test by showing he could share a stage with a sitting president and appear to belong there. He was greatly helped by the fact that while he forcefully attacked the president's policies, Obama seemed to be sleepwalking through the first matchup.

But these female suburban swing voters, while impressed somewhat by Romney's strong performance, were still unconvinced after the first debate, and also the second.

In this last debate, Romney appeared to have a new strategy. After a year of hardball politics, he stifled his attack inclinations and worked at coming across as not just presidential, but also reasonable and likable.

Monday night, the GOP nominee seemed to share most of Obama's policies. Pay no attention to that man behind the yearlong primary campaign curtain — the one who harshly, repeatedly (and often inaccurately) attacked the president's policies.

President seeks refuge in pettiness

JAY AMBROSE
COLUMNIST

President Barack Obama has a problem with foreign policy that's much the same as his problem with economic policy — the state of things. The economy is in the worst recovery since World War II, the world is likewise a scary mess, and so maybe it wasn't surprising in a debate on foreign issues Monday night that Obama sought refuge in pettiness.

If the topic was something big and large, such as an agenda for peace, the president would snarl at Mitt Romney about something like how this Republican challenger didn't really want to save the American auto industry. Romney would try to correct him, Obama would interrupt, the debate would dissolve into accusations of untruthfulness, and Obama could then breathe easy.

After all, can you imagine him answering Romney's remark about Russia walking away from a nuclear disarmament program?

It's true, you know. The Russian government said just this month that it was going to end a 20-year deal under which the United States has been disposing of its nuclear bombs. Russian President Vladimir Putin, who has made it repeatedly clear that he longs for a return to the good, old Soviet days, went a step further by later directing a major military exercise in which unarmed missiles were launched.

Maybe Putin suspects growing U.S. weakness, and maybe he suspects it because of a couple of other matters Romney mentioned. One was a tour in which Obama went around parts of the world mentioning U.S. faults, apparently as a means of endearing us to others. Another was Obama telling Poland we would not install a missile defense system there to guard against Iranian or other attacks on Europe.

Romney pointed to other ways the world was out of whack these days, such as the seeming rise of jihadist activity, turmoil throughout the Middle East and Iran venturing ever nearer to attainment of nuclear weaponry.

Obama was able to say some things are better now than they were when he took office. We are out of Iraq, for instance.

He did not say that he pretty much followed the plan of George W. Bush in getting us out, and he seemed to have forgotten that he did want to leave some forces there to help the Iraqis, even though the Iraqis wouldn't go along.

Both candidates were right that a strong economy is an important part of our national security, and Obama's problem is a simple one: His policies have been tested and failed. He thought, however, that he had Romney in a tough spot when he said the challenger did not want any government guarantees for the auto industry when it was suffering badly. In fact, Romney had written a New York Times opinion piece in November 2008 saying at the end that the "federal government should provide guarantees for post-bankruptcy financing and assure car buyers that their warranties are not at risk."

Maybe, some researchers have said, that approach would not have worked, but it is not absolutely clear yet that the Obama-engineered bankruptcy and bailout will work, either.

In an online Forbes magazine article, Louis Woodhill writes that General Motors is losing market share and could face bankruptcy again. It may well be that a leaner, meaner GM envisioned by Romney would be doing a lot better right now.

White House told of attack claim

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Two hours after the U.S. Consulate came under attack in Benghazi, Libya, the White House was told that a militant group was claiming responsibility for the violence that killed the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans.

A State Department email sent to intelligence officials and the White House situation room said the Islamist group Ansar al-Sharia claimed responsibility on Facebook and Twitter, and also called for an attack on the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli.

The document may fuel Republican efforts to show that the White House knew it was a terrorist attack, even as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations was saying — five days afterward — that it appeared to be a protest gone awry.

The Obama administration's account of the Benghazi events has become a campaign issue, with Republican challenger Mitt Romney and GOP lawmakers accusing the White House of misleading Americans about the nature of the attack.

The Associated Press and other news organizations obtained the unclassified email and two related emails from government officials who requested anonymity because they were not authorized to speak about them publicly.

Meanwhile, the Tunisian government said it has arrested a 28-year-old Tunisian linked to the U.S. Consulate attack. Interior Ministry spokesman Tarrouch Khaled said Wednesday that the suspect, Ali Harzi, was in custody in Tunis. Khaled told the AP "his case is in the hands of justice," but did not elaborate.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Wednesday that the review board she appointed to investigate the attack is "looking at everything," rather than "cherry picking one story here or one document there."

White House press secretary Jay Carney said the emails represented just one piece of information the administration was receiving at the time.

"There were emails about all sorts of information that was becoming available in the aftermath of the attack," Carney said. "The whole point of an intelligence community and what they do is to assess strands of information and make judgments about what happened and who is responsible."

Volunteer shot, killed at church service

By Norman Gomlak
Associated Press

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. – A volunteer leading a prayer service at a Georgia megachurch was shot and killed Wednesday morning, and a former church employee was taken into custody at a shopping mall hours later.

Shooting suspect Floyd Palmer

The shots were fired just before 10 a.m. inside a chapel on the campus of World Changers Church International, which said it has 30,000 followers in a suburb south of Atlanta.

The church's well-known founder and leader, the Rev. Creflo Dollar, was not at the church at the time of the shooting, Fulton County Police Cpl. Kay Lester said.

Authorities identified the suspect as Floyd Palmer, a former facilities maintenance employee at the church in his early 50s. Lester said Palmer had resigned from his job at the church in August for "personal reasons."

Palmer was taken into custody without incident a few hours later at a mall.

About 20 to 25 people were gathered in the chapel Wednesday morning, when authorities say the gunman walked in and began shooting.

The victim was identified as Gregory McDowell, a 39-year-old church volunteer who was leading a prayer at the time. Investigators were working to determine if Palmer and McDowell knew each other.

Police arrest teen in death of girl

WESTMINSTER – A teenager who lived a mile from a 10-year-old Colorado girl who was abducted and killed earlier this month has been arrested in her death, along with a May attack on a runner, authorities said Wednesday.

Police in the Denver suburb of Westminster said they took 17-year-old Austin Reed Sigg into custody Tuesday night after receiving a phone call, apparently from his mother, that led them to Sigg.

Jessica Ridgeway disappeared Oct. 5 while walking to school. Her remains were found five days later in a field at a park, and police said her body was "not intact."

The arrest case came a day after police said Jessica's abduction was linked to the May 28 attempted kidnapping of a 22-year-old runner at another area park, the Ketner Lake Open Space.

In that case, a woman fought off a stranger who grabbed her from behind and put a rag that smelled of chemicals over her mouth, authorities said.

Authorities didn't say why they think the two cases are connected, but they noted Sigg will be charged in both crimes. His first court appearance is set for today.

Terror plot sentence upped to 37 years

SEATTLE – An Algerian man whose sentence for plotting to blow up the Los Angeles airport around the turn of the new millennium was thrown out for being too lenient was ordered Wednesday to spend 37 years in prison.

Ahmed Ressam, who had trained with al-Qaida in Afghanistan, was arrested in December 1999 when a customs agent noticed that he appeared suspicious as he drove off a ferry from Canada onto Washington's Olympic Peninsula. A resulting search turned up a trunk full of explosives.

U.S. District Judge John C. Coughenour had twice ordered him to serve 22-year terms, but both times the sentences were rejected on appeal.

This time, Ressam's attorneys conceded that he should face at least three decades to satisfy the appeals courts, but no more than 34 years.

Government takes stronghold

BANI WALID – Libya's government declared Wednesday that it had taken control of one of the last strongholds of deposed dictator Moammar Gadhafi's loyalists, as its fighters in the heart of the city fired their guns into the air to celebrate victory after fierce battles that left dozens dead and thousands displaced.

The capture of Bani Walid, 90 miles southeast of Tripoli, was a triumph for the government that replaced Gadhafi's regime. But the length of time it took the government to secure the town — a full year — underlined the difficulties faced by the new regime in imposing its authority over squabbling tribes and heavily armed militias.

Taliban says inside attacks to increase

KABUL – Taliban insurgents will increase the number of insider attacks against coalition and Afghan forces, which have resulted in the deaths of at least 52 foreign troops so far this year, the movement's reclusive leader said Wednesday.

In an emailed statement congratulating Muslims as they prepare to celebrate the Eid al-Adha holiday, Mullah Mohammad Omar urged "every brave Afghan in the ranks of the foreign forces and their Afghan hirelings ... to strike them."

"Jihadist activities inside the circle of the state militias are the most effective stratagem. Its dimension will see further expansion, organization and efficiency," he said. "Increase your efforts to expand the area of infiltration in the ranks of the enemy."

Assassination blamed on Syria

BEIRUT – Lebanon's main opposition bloc stepped up pressure Wednesday on the Hezbollah-dominated government to resign after blaming the Shiite militant group's ally Syria for a car bomb that killed a top intelligence officer.

The anti-Syrian opposition alliance said Lebanon's rival groups can't hold a national dialogue until the government led by Hezbollah and its allies steps down.

Friday's assassination of senior intelligence officer Brig. Gen. Wissam al-Hassan in a car bomb has stirred up sectarian tensions in Lebanon, where Sunnis and Shiites are deeply divided over the Syrian civil war.

The court upheld in full the initial 2010 guilty verdict and sentence, which includes a three-year prison term, against the 35-year-old rogue trader.

Hamas blasts Israel with rockets, draws airstrike

By Josef Federman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM – Hamas militants in the Gaza Strip fired dozens of rockets and mortar shells Wednesday into southern Israel in the heaviest bombardment on the area in months, drawing ominous Israeli threats of retaliation and dangers of escalation.

The violence came a day after a landmark visit to Gaza by the emir of Qatar. Israeli officials suggested the visit, the first by a head of state to the Hamas-ruled territory, emboldened the militant group.

The rocket fire began shortly after the emir left Gaza late Tuesday and continued through the night. Israeli officials said more than 80 projectiles were fired, and Hamas claimed responsibility for many of the attacks.

Israel responded with a series of airstrikes on rocket launchers, killing two Palestinian militants, according to Gaza medical officials. Two other Palestinians were killed Tuesday.

Three Thai laborers working on an Israeli farm were wounded, when a rocket hit a chicken coop. Other rockets badly damaged five houses and broke car windows. Schools in the area were closed.

Many people spent the day indoors, while others stayed close to the makeshift cement shelters found in the streets of southern Israeli towns. In one farming community, shrapnel covered trees and a children's playhouse in a backyard.

"Sometimes it feels like a scene out of the movie `Platoon,' something out of the Vietnam War. We can stay at home and just hear the noise of the war," said Tamara Cohen, a resident of the border community of Ein Habesor whose children, ages 9 and 5, spent the night in a fortified "safe room" in their home.

A video issued by Hamas' military wing showed six rockets peeling off in rapid succession. Later, from what appears to be a different location, eight rockets shot off, leaving plumes of black smoke behind them. Hamas said the video was made earlier in the day, though it provided no proof.

Hamas officials shuttered schools in border areas.

Residents said they worried an escalation of fighting would ruin the upcoming Muslim celebration of Eid al-Adha, when Gaza residents feast, visit families, dress their children in new clothes and take them out to play.

U.N. backs holiday truce for Syria

By Karin Laub and Ben Hubbard
Associated Press

BEIRUT – The U.N. Security Council gave unanimous backing Wednesday to a four-day truce proposed by the international mediator for Syria to mark a major Muslim holiday after he warned that the failure of yet another cease-fire plan would only worsen the fighting.

Yet even this modest effort — the international community's only plan for scaling back the violence — appears doomed.

Previous cease-fire missions have failed, in part because neither Syrian President Bashar Assad nor rebels trying to topple him had an incentive to end their bloody war of attrition. Both sides believe they can still make gains on the battlefield even as they are locked in a stalemate, and neither has faith in negotiations on a political transition.

Lakhdar Brahimi, the U.N.-Arab League envoy to Syria, has proposed that both sides lay down their arms during the Muslim holiday of Eid al-Adha, which begins Friday.

The Security Council is normally divided on Syria, but Assad allies Russia and China joined other council members in endorsing the idea of a temporary truce that is meant to pave the way for talks on ending Syria's 19-month-old conflict.

The response on the ground ranged from lukewarm to downright rejection. Syrian government officials said they were still studying the idea, while Syria's political opposition said it was skeptical of the regime's promises.

State showing off Maxey Flats progress

FRANKFORT – State officials are opening a northeastern Kentucky dumpsite for low-level radioactive waste up to visitors next month.

The Kentucky Division of Waste Management has scheduled an open house at the Maxey Flats site at Hillsboro on Nov. 1.

Project supervisor Scott Wilburn said the event provides an opportunity for people to see Maxey Flats firsthand and ask questions of people charged with cleaning it up.

Maxey Flats was used commercially for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste until 1978 when remediation work got under way.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is now mulling a request for final remediation, including construction of a final cap to contain radioactive materials.

Police say laser aimed at chopper

LOUISVILLE – A University of Louisville student accused of shining a laser pointer at a police helicopter is facing felony charges.

Louisville police say 19-year-old Jeffry Ledington is charged with two wanton endangerment counts. He was arrested at his dormitory early Sunday, shortly after the incident.

The helicopter pilot, Louisville Officer Carey Hirtzel, says the green laser lit up the entire cockpit and all he could see was green. He says he averted his eyes and turned the helicopter away from the beam of light.

Major Advancement in Joint Relief!
Clinical Research Exposes:
What Drug Companies Don't Want You to Know About Your Joint Pain!
Great news if you suffer with stiff joints, back pain, achy knees, fingers and hips

By Steve Meyerson
Freelance health reporter

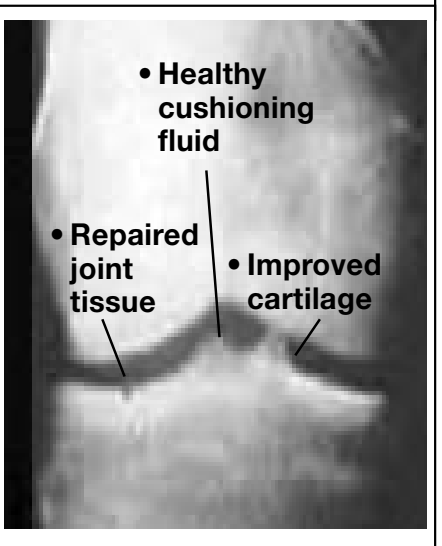
If you deal with joint agony every day, I have bad news for you. "Big Pharma" likes it that way. They're making billions on products that only give temporary relief. And may be hiding the very thing that could end your discomfort forever.

Reports of gastrointestinal bleeding, ulcers and kidney injury are scaring even the neediest patients away. And if you've been taking these products regularly, you should be concerned. But there is an answer…

Recently, a new joint-relief pill called BeActive, was released in the U.S. that's been helping thousands reverse their joint problems. And it's done it without one single side effect reported. Yet, there are companies out there that don't want you to know about it.

"No one can be sure why, but it appears the pill could be perceived as a threat to their bottom line. After all, if people start moving away from traditional joint pills, some companies could take a financial hit". That's a big problem for their "bottom line". But an even bigger problem for people who are desperate for help and aren't being told there's a solution." Says Jim Caras, an industry insider and CEO of Health Direct (the maker of BeActive).

BEFORE: Stiff joint damage causing intense knee agony.



AFTER: Improved flexibility and movement after taking BeActive.

Extraordinary Science

"The research is impressive. There's simply nothing out there like it" says Caras . The core ingredient in BeActive is clinically proven and certified to inhibit MMP enzymes (the stuff that destroys your joint tissue and causes them to hurt).

"BeActive is a major advancement over old-fashioned remedies that can really damage your body. It's already approved in Australia for maintaining healthy joints. Its just a matter of time until the rest of the world catches up" says Caras. That's why I enthusiastically recommend it."

"Clinical Study Shows 93% Improvement"
-Jim Caras, CEO of Health Direct

BeActive is proven by over 20 scientific studies; they were conducted by some of the most respected medical research institutions in the world – including the U.S., U.K., France, Japan and New Zealand.

Here's What People Are Saying:

No More Medications!

"The results are almost unbelievable. I do not need any joint medications whatsoever now. I am doing things that have been impossible for me to do for some time."
-Rosa M., Italy

DID YOU KNOW?

When you throw away a plastic shopping bag, it can end up in a landfill or become litter on land or at sea, taking more than 1,000 years to break down. It's estimated that, worldwide, 1 million plastic bags are used every minute, and that number is expected to increase. And while most plastic bags can be recycled, fewer than 5 percent of plastic bags used in the United States are actually recycled. Many plastic bags never actually reach landfills — instead, they blow away and become stuck in fences and trees, contributing to unsightly litter.

cently closed Freedom underground mine in Henderson County as well as the Highland and Dodge Hill underground mines in Union County — as well as several mining complexes in West Virginia.

The UMW lawsuit, filed in the federal court in Charleston, W. Va., says the spinoff also made Patriot the parent company of 64 subsidiaries, including Peabody Coal Co., which once was the dominant mining company in Western Kentucky, Southern Indiana and Southern Illinois.

In 2008, Patriot also acquired Magnum Coal Co. from Arch Coal, including responsibility for its retirees.

Ultimately, the union charged, Patriot was set up as a company with nearly as many financial liabilities — including retiree obligations — as it had assets.

The lawsuit maintains that Peabody and Arch "planned to transfer (their) employees and benefit plan obligations to Patriot for the purpose of depriving (their) employees and retired employees of their welfare and retiree benefits," which the UMW said is illegal under the federal Employee Retirement and Income Securities Act (ERISA).

The UMW's lawsuit said 6,036 Peabody retirees, former workers, spouses, widows or dependents now rely on Patriot for retirement benefits, even though 91.3 percent of those beneficiaries "never worked for Patriot, but were former employees, or dependents of former employees, of Peabody or its subsidiaries."

"Peabody and Arch established separate spinoff companies, which have become today's Patriot Coal, with the publicly stated intention of getting rid of their obligations to the retirees who gave a lifetime of service to those companies," UMW President Cecil E. Roberts said in a statement. "The companies bragged about getting those liabilities off their balance sheets.

"And as people with long experience in the coal industry, they knew that the cyclical nature of the industry would inevitably lead to Patriot's inability to pay for those liabilities," Roberts said. "It was a company set up to fail. But under the law, that does not relieve Peabody and Arch of their obligation to these retirees, their spouses and their widows."

Patriot filed for bankruptcy protection July 9 after reporting losses totaling nearly $239 million in 2010, 2011 and the first three months of 2012.

The UMW fears that Patriot will use the bankruptcy reorganization process to reduce retiree benefits. Roberts spoke to a crowd of 3,000 retirees and spouses in Evansville in late August, promising to fight for their benefits.

Last month, a Peabody spokeswoman issued a statement saying Peabody felt "confident Patriot was a viable company when it was spun off in 2007."

A Patriot Coal spokesman said the company had no comment on the UMW lawsuit.

Patriot CEO exiting a few months after taking post

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – The CEO of Patriot Coal is stepping aside less than five months after taking the job.

Irl Engelhardt, a long-time executive at Peabody where he served as chairman and director of one of the world's largest coal producers, took over this year just weeks before the troubled Peabody spin-off sought bankruptcy protection.

The company did not provide more details about the change at the top of the company, or about changes to corporate governance announced Wednesday.

Patriot named Bennett Hatfield to succeed Engelhardt.

Hatfield, 55, became president of the company in May on the same day that Engelhardt was named CEO.

He had served as chief operating officer since September of last year. He will also take a seat on the board, effective immediately.

Before joining Patriot, Hatfield was CEO and a board member at International Coal Group from 2005 until the June 2011 sale of that company.

The company also announced Wednesday that its finance committee was being absorbed by the full board and that Mark Schroeder, senior vice president of financial planning, was leaving to take a position with a company outside of the coal industry.

Michael Scharf was named chairman. He previously served as the board's independent lead director.

Patriot Coal Corp., based in St. Louis, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in July as the industry was ravaged by anemic demand for coal.

The slowing global economy and plummeting natural gas prices, which can be used as an alternate for coal, has led to thousands of layoffs and numerous mine closures across the industry.

Peabody, also based in St. Louis, posted an 84 percent decline in net income for the third quarter on Monday.

and Evansville, she really wanted to go but made no plans to take off the time from work.

Then, her sister Bonnie Baggerly surprised her on Monday with an early birthday present consisting of lunch on the river. The sisters had a good time pointing out familiar landmarks on shore and waved at a small airplane that buzzed the riverboat twice in the vicinity of the Henderson Airport.

Other birthdays, anniversaries and special celebrations were announced as the boat made the turn just down river from Henderson Island and headed back to the landing.

One of those was Dorene "Tobi" Loesch of Evansville who was accompanied by Evansville artist Billy Hedel.

Loesch was celebrating her 80th birthday with a trip on the river, and she was thoroughly enjoying sitting at the second deck bow and taking in the sights along the river.

She grew up in Muscatine, Iowa, on the Mississippi River, she said, and used to save her baby-sitting money as a teenager to ride riverboats to socialize, listen to music and dance. She hasn't had a chance to ride for many years.

"It's bringing back lots of memories," she said. "And it's a beautiful day."

That was a common thread of conversation for the day. Passengers were well aware that more typical fall weather is on the way, and it might be one of the last good days to be on the river this year.

"It's a great day," said Jim Smith, who lounged on the sunny top deck with his wife, Sherry, and shared a story he'd just heard about the frilly metalwork called flutes that sometimes adorn the tops of riverboat smokestacks.

He'd heard that in the golden era for such river transportation, the flutes indicated a higher caliber of vessel and helped coin the phrase "highfalutin."

"Today," Smith said, "we're highfalutin."

DONNA B. STINNETT/THE GLEANER

Passengers board the Belle of Cincinnati on Wednesday for their two-hour lunch excursion cruise. The riverboat was in the area on a Fall Foliage Tour and offered excursions from Henderson, Owensboro, Evansville, Paducah, Metropolis, Ill., and Madison, Ind. during the tour.

United States to work on farms to have more than an elementary school level education.

In fact, Earhart's own mother only had a third-grade education. Yet she made sure that Earhart started school as a kindergartner, where for the first time, he began to learn English. Up until then, he'd only known Spanish.

When he graduated from the first grade, his mother left his father. That's when the family moved in with Earhart's grandfather. Within a couple of years, his grandfather put him to work.

"And so, he brought me a box," Earhart said. "This is your shoe box. With this you are going to go out and you're going to shine shoes. So, when you make $2, you can come home."

Shining a pair of shoes cost his customers 10 cents. Just polish or just wax was 5 cents.

For $2 worth of earnings, Earhart's grandfather would give him 25 cents, which he'd use to buy candy, popcorn and to see movies on Saturdays.

Later, when he was older, he picked cotton to help his mother, who had five children, put meat on the table — until cotton picking machines were brought in from Tennessee to do that work.

Earhart then became a migrant worker with his family.

"My Momma took us all to Oregon to pick strawberries, took us to Michigan to pick cucumbers, and we went to Colorado to pull sugar beets," he said.

Meanwhile, Earhart also said that the term "Hispanic" is a government term. He said the term describes people from Spain, and that before Spain conquered Mexico, residents there spoke different Native American dialects.

The correct term to describe people from Latin America is Latino, and Latinos are the highest population minority group in the United States, he said.

Undocumented Latinos come to this country because they are unable to obtain visas and yet they want to be able to work to support their families, Earhart said.

He added that he supports President Barack Obama's decision to stop deporting young, undocumented immigrants who match certain criteria that had been previously proposed under the Development, Relief and Education for Alien Minors, or DREAM, Act.

"There is a lot of politics that has been taking place with the Hispanic population, but it's looking better and better," he said. "We are starting to realize that they are indeed bringing a lot of good cultures, work ethics as I indicated."

Bank of America being sued for $1 billion over bad loans

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – The latest federal lawsuit over alleged mortgage fraud paints an unflattering picture of a doomed lender: Executives at Countrywide Financial urged workers to churn out loans, accepted fudged applications and tried to hide ballooning defaults.

The suit, filed Wednesday by the top federal prosecutor in Manhattan, also underscored how Bank of America's purchase of Countrywide in July 2008, just before the financial crisis, backfired severely.

The prosecutor, Preet Bharara, said he was seeking more than $1 billion, but the suit could ultimately recover much more in damages.

Bank of America spokesman Lawrence Grayson said the bank "has stepped up and acted responsibly to resolve legacy mortgage matters." He called the allegation that the bank has failed to buy back loans "simply false."

Countrywide was a giant in mortgage lending, but was also known for approving exotic, even risky, loans. By 2007, as the market for subprime mortgages collapsed, Countrywide was anxious for revenue.

The lawsuit alleged that the company loosened its standards for making loans while telling Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which were buying loans from Countrywide, that standards were getting tighter.

Sandoval hits three homers in Giants' win

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO – With three mighty swings, Pablo Sandoval put the San Francisco Giants ahead in this World Series and put himself in a class with Mr. October.

Sandoval hit three home runs and joined Reggie Jackson, Babe Ruth and Albert Pujols as the only sluggers to do it in the Series, and the Giants jolted Justin Verlander the Detroit Tigers 8-3 on Wednesday night in Game 1.

A rollicking AT&T Park crowd — a sea of black and orange outfits — roared as Sandoval connected in his first three at-bats. Popular in the Bay Area as the Kung Fu Panda for his roly-poly shape, he went 4 for 4 and drove in four runs. A Giant panda for sure.

Verlander, the reigning Cy Young winner so dominant in this postseason, looked uncomfortable from the get-go and constantly pawed at the mound.

The final score raised a nagging question for manager Jim Leyland and his favored Tigers: Did too much rest after a playoff sweep of the Yankees mean too much rust?

Tagged by Sandoval for a solo shot in the first inning, Verlander could only mouth `Wow!' after the Giants star launched a two-run drive in the third. Sandoval reprised his power show from this year's All-Star game, when his bases-loaded triple highlighted a five-run first inning against Verlander.

And if there was any doubt that Verlander was shaky, the best sign came in the fourth. That's when pitcher Barry Zito, a career .099 hitter, sliced an RBI single with two outs off the current AL MVP for a 6-0 lead.

The festive crowd stood and applauded when it was announced that Verlander was being pulled for a pinch hitter in the fifth. Sandoval gave them another reason to get up moments later when he hit a solo homer off reliever Al Alburquerque in the fifth, answering the cheers by waving his batting helmet in a curtain call.

Pujols homered three times last year, Jackson accomplished the feat in 1977 and Ruth did it in 1926 and again in 1928.

For good measure, Sandoval lined a single his last time up.

Owensboro welcomes tough game from Colonels

By Kevin Patton

Heading into the playoffs, Owensboro coach Joe Prince welcomes Friday's regular-season finale against Henderson County.

"We need to play a tough game," said Prince, who is in his 10th season as the Red Devils' coach.

Owensboro (6-3) finished play in the Class 4-A First District locked in a three-way tie with Lone Oak and Madisonville. While a win over Henderson County (7-2) would guarantee the Red Devils would win the tiebreaker and take the district's top seed, Prince believes his team will win the tiebreaker regardless of what happens on Friday. That means Owensboro would host 1-8 Breckinridge County next week in the first round of the 4-A playoffs.

Following comfortable district wins over Calloway County (20-0) and winless Hopkins Central (55-7), Friday's matchup at Colonel Stadium stands out in this stretch of games for the Red Devils.

"We need a tough game in there somewhere," Prince said.

Henderson County can relate after outscoring its three district opponents 146-27 over the last three weeks. The Colonels, who won the 6-A First District, will host Fern Creek (1-8) next week in the first round of the playoffs.

Winning a district championship is one indication that Owensboro's squad is heading in the right direction after finishing 6-5 and 5-7 the last two years. "We're a young team, and we exceeded all of the preseason expectations. I'm not talking just about wins and losses," Prince said. "We've been getting better every week.

"We lost one game we felt like we should have won, but we won a couple that maybe we weren't supposed to," he said.

The Red Devils beat district rival Lone Oak 45-31 three weeks ago. The Purple Flash has been ranked all season and is still No. 10 in the state in 4-A. They also posted a 24-14 victory over Lexington Lafayette, a team that finished just out of the top 10 in 6-A in this week's Associated Press poll.

The loss that really bothers Prince was the 13-9 setback at Madisonville. The team's other two losses were to teams ranked No. 1 in their respective classes — Owensboro Catholic 20-7 and Bowling Green 31-3.

The keys for Friday's game at Henderson County are simple, Prince said. "We can't beat ourselves with turnovers and penalties. It's probably going to rain. The team that holds on to the ball will have an advantage. We have to be good tacklers. Going against a team that runs the veer or the option, you have to be real good tacklers because they hit it so quick."

The kicking game will also be a factor, Prince said, in matchup of two programs known for having strong kicking games.

Owensboro leads the all-time series with Henderson County 31-21 though the Colonels have won the last two meetings.

Kentucky's freshmen mesh well in scrimmage

Goodwin scores 32 in Blue-White matchup

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON – There were many moments during Wednesday night's Blue-White scrimmage where Kentucky's freshmen justified the lofty expectations placed upon them.

Archie Goodwin showed some flash while scoring a game-high 32 points.

Willie Cauley-Stein was a formidable post presence with 14 points and 12 rebounds.

Swingman Alex Poythress added 25 points with quickness and athleticism.

A sore back slowed highly touted forward Nerlens Noel, but the point was seeing how this foursome played together and with others in their first competitive appearance before the Wildcats faithful.

Early returns were encouraging, as they contributed to both teams in a game won by the Blue 89-88.

However, the bottom line is meeting John Calipari's high standards and the Wildcats coach quickly noted that this is a work in progress.

"We have a way to go," Calipari said afterward. "We don't rebound, we don't scramble. Other than that, we're a pretty good team."

Calipari was kidding, noting replacing six players from last season's national championship team would lead to some falloff.

Kentucky had scrimmaged just 12 minutes before Wednesday because he has spent much of fall practice teaching his young squad fundamentals.

That showed with a lack of defense.

"It's going to take a lot more talking on defense and just executing on the defensive schemes more than we have been," Goodwin said. "We're still learning, so we'll continue to practice on it. We'll get better and better every day we practice it as long as we work hard."

At the same time, some nice combinations emerged thanks to newcomers such as transfer Julius Mays, a graduate student who played last season for Wright State.

He displayed good speed and ball movement along with a nice outside shot for the Blue squad. The highlight of his 13-point game was a fadeaway 3-pointer as the shot clock expired, which looked more planned than hurried.

"It's just trying to find my game," Mays said. "I just want to do whatever it is this team needs me to do, whether that's scoring or coming in and creating for others or distributing the ball, or even if it's coming in and getting greedy on the defensive end. I'm willing to do whatever it takes to win."

He seemed to find chemistry with Cauley-Stein, who fed him for one shot before Mays returned the favor by lobbing a pass to the 7-footer for a dunk to help the Blue team lead 29-17.

"Me and Julius are (among) seven players that figure to get a lot of playing time, so we had to go at it like that," Cauley-Stein said.

Noel finished with nine points on 4-of-7 shooting.

Among the veterans, Kyle Wiltjer had 28 points, Jon Hood 17 and Jarrod Polson 13. Sophomore Ryan Harrow had 20.

SEC newcomers must adapt to league's speed, talent

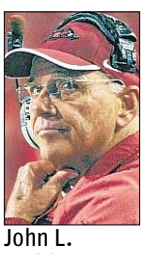
By Kurt Voigt
Associated Press

College football is college football, right?

Not in the Southeastern Conference, home to six straight national championships and the inside track to a seventh this season. The players seem faster, the talent level is higher, the scrutiny hotter than anywhere else.

Take it from the coaches and coordinators — especially the new arrivals who have to adjust quickly if they want to stick around for any length of time.

"It's like every week is murderer's row," Arkansas coach John L. Smith said. "You've got to prepare for the real guys, the guys who look like they should be playing on Sundays."



John L. Smith

Smith has seen college football from just about every angle in his 40 years of coaching. His career began at his alma mater, Weber State, and his 19 years as a head coach has included stops at Louisville and Michigan State.

The 63-year-old Smith received his first full-time taste of the SEC in 2009 when he was hired at Arkansas by Bobby Petrino as an assistant.

Smith coached against SEC teams at his previous stops, including an annual matchup with Kentucky while with the Cardinals, but nothing prepared him for the athleticism he saw in the SEC on a weekly basis — leading to fewer running lanes and even fewer open receivers.

"I'm not downgrading any of the other leagues, but you take a look at some of the other leagues and you say, `My goodness, that's slow football,"' Smith said. "From the sideline sometimes, you're saying 'OK, we've got a hole and we're going to get 7-10 (yards).' And you look back and you've got 2-3, just because it's a faster game."

Coaches enter the league with reputations as an offensive whiz, only to find they must quickly change plans to counter the oncoming rush of the SEC's defensive linemen.

First-year Florida offensive coordinator Brent Pease, who spent two seasons in the same position at Kentucky in 2001-02, said keeping the quarterback in one place in the pocket simply isn't an option.

The undefeated Gators are last in the SEC in passing offense this season, averaging just 137.7 yards per game through the air, but their spread-option attack has kept defenses off balance and led to 212.7 yards rushing per game.

Florida coach Will Muschamp cut his coaching teeth as a graduate assistant at Auburn before later coaching at LSU and then back to Auburn.

Muschamp left the SEC in 2008 for a three-year stint in the pass-happy Big 12 as Texas' defensive coordinator.

The second-year Florida coach said he believes in doing whatever it takes to win games, even in that means throwing the ball "60 times a game."

That said, he echoed Pease's thoughts about the difficulty of trying to do exactly that in the SEC — where four teams (Alabama, LSU, Florida and South Carolina) are in the top 10 nationally in total defense.

"The defensive lines, that's the difference in playing in this league and these other leagues you watch on TV," Muschamp said.

"I know y'all like all these points being scored, but the quarterback won't make it through the game and the season in our league."

Murray State suspends Jackson for entire season

The Associated Press

MURRAY – Murray State has suspended sophomore guard Zay Jackson for the 2012-13 season.

Jackson had been suspended indefinitely last month after his arrest after striking two people with his car in a Wal-Mart parking lot following an altercation. He pleaded guilty on Oct. 12 to wanton endangerment.

A surveillance video was released showing Jackson driving around the parking lot with one of the victims on the hood of his Chevy Monte Carlo.

Athletics director Allen Ward referenced the video when announcing that the suspension had been extended, saying that besides meeting his legal obligations, Jackson would have to "go above and beyond the steps required to be an exemplary citizen" to be reinstated.

"It goes without saying that Zay showed a considerable lack of judgment that has not only embarrassed himself, but his team, the university and our fans as well," Ward said.

"I will not condone such behavior. He is fortunate that the results of his actions were not more harmful than they were. But if we truly care about making a difference in his life, it is imperative that he spends this year showing me and Coach (Steve) Prohm that he is remorseful, getting the help that he needs, and deserving of a second chance."

Game On Dude will try again in Breeders' Cup

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES – Game On Dude will be out to avenge his agonizing loss of a year ago when he runs again in the $5 million Breeders' Cup Classic, and a victory could give credence to a bid for Horse of the Year honors.

In 2011, Game On Dude led most of the way under the lights at Churchill Downs before getting caught in the closing yards by 14-1 shot Drosselmeyer.

Game On Dude is one of a total of 180 horses, including eight defending or former champions, which were pre-entered Wednesday for the $25 million, 15-race Breeders' Cup world championships at Santa Anita on Nov. 2-3. That's down from last year's record total of 193.

The Classic will be shown live and in prime time on Nov. 3 for the first time on NBC.

Trained by Bob Baffert, Game On Dude was pre-entered in the 1 ¼-mile Classic to be run on his home track, where he is undefeated in five starts and will be the likely favorite. A full field of 14 horses was pre-entered, including four trained by Bill Mott, whose Drosselmeyer won last year by 1 ½ lengths.

Mott had a huge weekend last year in Louisville, winning the Ladies' Classic with Royal Delta and then the Classic on the following day. He's set himself up for a possible repeat at Santa Anita.

"Both races are very, very interesting and the competition is deep in both," he said. "We'd like to do it again this year. I hope they all show up and run their best race and get a chance to show how good they are."

Game On Dude will attempt to give Baffert his first win in the Classic with new rider Rafael Bejarano, who replaced Chantal Sutherland.

Islanders will move to new Brooklyn arena

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – The New York Islanders finally have a new home and it's in Brooklyn, the borough that is suddenly a hot bed of pro sports 54 years after baseball's Dodgers headed west.

"It's a new place and it's only 35 minutes away by train," team owner Charles Wang said Wednesday.

After seven months of negotiations, and offers to move the team out of New York, Wang announced that the Islanders will relocate about 25 miles west once their lease expires at Nassau Coliseum after the 2014-15 season.

Following perfect week, Stinson believes Wildcats will end skid

Gleaner staff

Coming off a 10-0 week, Mitchell Stinson predicts that Kentucky will end its six-game losing streak with a road win over SEC newcomer Missouri. However, the rest of the members of The Gleaner Football Forecast believe the Wildcats' struggles will continue.

The forecasters were unanimous in most of the other games this week, including Henderson County's regular-season finale with Owensboro. The only exceptions were the Big Ten matchup between Nebraska and Michigan and this week's NFL contests.

Stinson turned in a perfect card last week and was the only panelist to correctly predict Louisiana-Monroe's double overtime at Western Kentucky. Mike Moore went 8-2 last week, WSON sports director Greg Busby was 7-3, while Jim Kurk and Kevin Patton were 6-4.

Thursday games favor home teams

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

In today's "any given Sunday" NFL, the thinking goes, any team can win — or lose — any game. What about any given Thursday? Turns out those matchups are the closest thing to a lock there is.

Heading into the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' midweek game at the Minnesota Vikings, home teams are 5-1 on Thursday nights this season, an .833 winning percentage; the only loss was by the struggling Carolina Panthers against the visiting Super Bowl champion New York Giants. Home teams are 12-3 (.800) on Thursdays over the past two years (discarding Week 1).

Those records are far better than the .602 winning percentage NFL home teams have enjoyed in all other games this season and the .571 they have since the start of the 2011 season, according to STATS LLC. Clearly, avoiding the road helps on the short weeks players say are hardest on their bodies — and that the league says will remain a staple of the schedule.

Being forced to play on a Thursday, instead of the usual Sunday, makes every club "miserable," according to Pittsburgh Steelers offensive lineman Max Starks, a nine-year veteran.

"It's who is less miserable than the other?" Starks said. "And the advantage typically tips to the team that doesn't have to travel."

His Steelers lost 26-23 at the Tennessee Titans on Oct. 11, a Thursday, when four key players for Pittsburgh got hurt: running backs Ike Redman (right ankle) and Rashard Mendenhall (Achilles tendon), offensive linemen Maurkice Pouncey (right leg) and Marcus Gilbert (right ankle).

Starks thinks that rash of injuries was not a coincidence. He has company.

Seattle Seahawks fullback Michael Robinson described the quick turnaround this way: "Go get in a car accident and then try to play two days later. That's how it feels."

He suggested allowing teams to keep all 53 players on the roster active for Thursdays, instead of trimming to 46, the way they do for all games now. That hasn't been discussed, though, the NFL says.

Baltimore Ravens center Matt Birk thinks a study should be done to see if there is "a fatigue factor" that affects players who get less rest between games.

IceMen remain winless, fall to Gwinnett, 3-1

By Steve Ford

It's official: losing is getting old quick for the Evansville IceMen.

Their initial foray into the ECHL Premier AA Hockey League remained fruitless Wednesday night at the Ford Center as another last-place team, the Gwinnett Gladiators, earned a 3-1 win in front of 2,947 fans.

The visitors entered the evening with just one win in four games for last place in the South Division, while the IceMen are now winless in four games and remain in the cellar of the North Division.

"They shut us down early and really took it to us in the first period," said IceMen coach and general manager Rich Kromm. "It seemed like we spent the whole period on our heels.

"They won all the loose pucks early in the game and we couldn't get anything going. It's going to be tough every game in this league."

Evansville was simply never in it.

Gwinnett owned the first period at both ends. The Gladiators spent vast stretches with the puck in front of Evansville's goal, but couldn't generate a score within their offense despite a 12-5 advantage in shots.

The visitors earned their 1-0 lead at the first break with a pair of takeaways from the IceMen's defense. Goalkeeper Rob Madore erased the first mistake with a fine stick save at point-blank range just 3:22 into the game.

But he could not stop the second chance after a turnover when Doug Jones pulled Madore away from the goal and then slid the puck to Christian Ouellet for an easy open-goal finish at 7:13.

Fed takes no new action, cites growth

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve said Wednesday that the U.S. economy is improving only moderately and still needs its support to help lower unemployment.

The Fed took no new action after a two-day policy meeting. It wants time to assess whether aggressive steps launched in September will boost growth and job creation.

In a statement released after the meeting, the central bank said hiring growth has been slow and the unemployment rate remains elevated. It noted that consumer spending has been a little stronger and the housing market has shown further signs of improvement, but growth in business investment has slowed.

The Fed also said inflation picked up slightly because of higher energy prices but the long-term inflation outlook remains stable.

The statement was approved on an 11-1 vote. Jeffrey Lacker, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, objected for the seventh consecutive meeting.

The unemployment rate fell in September to 7.8 percent, the first time it's been below 8 percent since January 2009.

The economy grew at a meager 1.3 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter.

New home sales best since 2010

WASHINGTON — Sales of new U.S. homes jumped last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 389,000, the highest level since a homebuyer's tax credit boosted sales in April 2010.

The Commerce Department says new home sales rose 5.7 percent in September, up from 368,000 in August. Sales have risen 27.1 percent in the past year. That's the strongest yearly gain since February, although sales are still well below healthy levels.

The figures do suggest the housing recovery is strengthening. Home prices are rising, builders are more confident and are breaking ground on more homes and sales of previously occupied homes have increased in the past year.

Rising sales are keeping inventories low. There were 145,000 new homes for sale at the end of September, near the record low of 143,000.

The buzz about cocoa is starting to fade as new production from African nations is adding to already plentiful supplies.

Cocoa for December delivery fell $99, or 4 percent, Wednesday to end at $2,399 per metric ton. Oil, gold and copper also dropped because of mounting concerns about slower global growth.

The price of cocoa rose nearly 6 percent last week as traders speculated that demand could improve because of signs that the U.S. economy may be getting healthier.

Now, there are reports of good production in the Ivory Coast and Nigeria while the harvest is progressing in West Africa, said Jack Scoville, vice president of Price Futures Group. Traders also speculated about whether demand will diminish in financially troubled Europe, which is home to the biggest number of chocolate consumers.

In other trading, most commodity prices were lower after more disappointing economic news from Europe outweighed a positive report on China's manufacturing sector.

Markit, a financial data company, said its purchasing managers' index for the manufacturing and services sectors of the 17 countries that use the euro currency fell in October to its lowest level since June 2009.

HSBC Corp. said preliminary results for its October purchasing managers' index in China rose to a three-month high of 49.1 points from 47.9 in September. The rate must be above 50 to indicate growth.

Slower growth means less demand for a wide range of commodities, from oil and copper to agricultural products.

Market calms after big sell-off

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The steep losses stopped Wednesday as the stock market turned calm, a day after one of its biggest sell-offs of the year. Indexes ended with slight losses after the Federal Reserve said the U.S. economy still needs support.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 25.19 points at 13,077.34, a day after one of its worst drops this year.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 4.36 points to close at 1,408.75 while the Nasdaq composite index fell 8.76 points to 2,991.70.

The latest batch of earnings reports wasn't as dire, and there was the occasional piece of encouraging news.

Do you have Psoriasis?

Plaque psoriasis is a long-term disease of the immune system that causes red scaly patches, often with a silvery scale, to appear on the skin. Approximately 1.5 million American adults suffer from moderate to severe plaque psoriasis. These plaques may itch, be painful, and can bleed. They can appear anywhere on the body, but are most commonly found on the elbows, knees, scalp and lower back. People with plaque psoriasis may notice that there are times when their skin worsens, then gets better.

The Deaconess Clinic Department of Dermatology is participating in a national clinical research study of an investigational drug for psoriasis. If you suffer from moderate to severe psoriasis, you may qualify to receive no-cost skin assessments by a board-certified dermatologist, study medication and compensation for time and travel. You must be at least 18 years old to participate.

Health insurance is not required for participation. To see if you qualify or to receive more information, please call the Research InfoLine at 812-474-7184 or toll free at 1-877-654-0311.

Relief for Allergy Symptoms

By Mike Farmer, RPh., Jed Dunaway, RPh., and Ginny Sue Floyd, RPh.

If you have environmental or seasonal allergies that don't respond to commercially available medications, or if your medication causes side effects, let us know. We can work with your doctor and help to solve your problem by compounding an oral or topical preparation containing the most appropriate medication or combination of medications to meet your specific needs. For example, we can compound combinations of antihistamines to stop the allergic response; anticholinergics to reduce secretions; decongestants to relieve the discomfort of congestion; and novel ingredients such as tranilast, which has been shown to stabilize mast cells. Topical medications are absorbed through the skin and therefore produce fewer systemic side effects, and can work quickly to stop a local skin reaction to an allergy.

Adoptee is running interference for birth family

Dear Amy: I am adopted. Unfortunately, my upbringing in my adoptive family was quite dysfunctional, involving verbal and emotional neglect and alcoholism. I forgave my parents for their transgressions many years ago. They are my parents and always will be.

Growing up, I felt the need to find my birth mother, and my adopted mother said she would support this effort.

The problem arose when I actually found my birth mother and my biological siblings years ago. I know that my mother feels threatened, and there are several underlying psychological issues at play.

I try to reassure her that she'll always be my mother no matter what. But she can be mean and spiteful about my birth family, and she has said some truly hateful things directed at me and them.

I enjoy having my birth family in my life, but out of respect for my adoptive mother I chose never to talk of my birth family with her.

My birth family has been present in my children's lives for nearly 20 years, and my daughter views my birth mother as a grandmother.

My daughter is getting married and has invited my birth mother. My mother recently called my daughter, saying that my birth mother isn't really her family.

I want my daughter to have a beautiful wedding. I know that my mother would behave at the wedding, but I'm worried about her capacity to say hateful things to me and my daughter beforehand. Any advice?

— Frustrating Dysfunctional Family

Dear FDF: Your choice to protect your adoptive mother from your relationship with your birth family over the years has had an unintended consequence: She continues to be threatened about a mature, ongoing relationship that she cannot control.

Tell your mother, "I know this is hard for you, but I really expect you to be kind and respectful. That would be a wonderful gift to your granddaughter."

If your mother has something to say, hear her out. But listening doesn't mean you have to do anything differently. This is your daughter's wedding, and she gets to decide the guest list. She also gets to decide who is "family." Your job is to back her up, and you're doing this very well.

Don't trash fluorescent light bulbs

Dear Heloise: What does an individual do with light bulbs once they're changed?

I'm talking about the fluorescent ones of the tubular variety.

Although they are energy- efficient and provide plenty of light, they are filled with noxious gas and won't fit in the average trash container.

So, what do we do with them?

— A Reader in Ohio

Dear Reader: You should never put fluorescent bulbs in the trash.

They contain mercury and need to be disposed of properly, or better yet, recycled.

Recycling not only helps the environment by reusing the glass, metal and other materials, it helps reduce the amount of mercury released into it.

Check with hardware stores in your area to see if they have a fluorescent-bulb recycling program. Many do, and will gladly take the old bulbs free of charge.

The Environmental Protection Agency also recommends checking Earth911.com for collection stations or schedules in your area.

'If we claim to be without sin, we deceive ourselves'

Dear Dr. Graham: I was always taught that at the end of each day we ought to ask God to forgive us for any sins we've committed during that day.

But sometimes I can't think of anything I've done wrong or that I ought to confess. Am I overlooking something?

— E.Y.

Dear E.Y.: What you were taught about asking God to forgive you at the end of each day is both commendable and wise (and it's a practice I've always tried to follow in my own life).

Why is this a good habit? One reason is because if we don't stop to think about our sins, we'll probably overlook them — and if we do that, we'll keep on doing them. Just as our hands grow calloused and insensitive if we keep rubbing them against something hard, so our hearts can become calloused and hardened to our sins when we don't face them and seek God's forgiveness.

And if we never ask for His forgiveness, we'll also never ask Him to help us overcome them.

But the main reason we need to deal with our sins as soon as possible is because sin cuts off fellowship with God.

If we have given our lives to Jesus, we are still members of His family if we sin — but our fellowship with Him is damaged, and we no longer are close to Him.

What are you overlooking? You're overlooking your own sins — even if you aren't aware of them.

The Bible says, "If we claim to be without sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us" (1 John 1:8).

Remember: We sin not only by what we do, but also by what we fail to do — including what goes on in our minds. Ask God to help you face your sins — and then seek God's forgiveness.

Risks, rewards must be weighed for all medicines

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: Every day, I depend on a pill to keep my blood pressure down and one to keep my cholesterol down.

So what's wrong with my depending on a pill every night to get a good night's sleep (triazolam)? I am a male, 87 years old.

Dear L.D.: It sounds like someone, maybe your doctor, is trying to get you to cut down on your sleeping pill. How come? All medicines have the possibility of side effects. The challenge as a doctor is to balance the benefit and the harm.

Both blood pressure and cholesterol medicines reduce your risk of heart disease and stroke, and the side effects are weighed against that. With sleeping medications, the risks are higher than they are for most blood pressure and cholesterol medicines.

The big risk is falling: The risk of a fall is substantially higher for people who take sleeping pills than for those who don't.

So, in the case of blood pressure and cholesterol medicines, they make you live longer (we hope) but can make you feel worse (but with any luck, not much worse). Sleeping pills, on the other hand, make you feel better but have a higher risk of falls and even of death (but very small). That's why your doctor may be trying to get you to cut down.

Good bedtime habits — including taking in no caffeine in the evening and avoiding bright lights, the television and your computer at least an hour before bed — can help people sleep, sometimes better than sleeping pills.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I have herpes HSV-2 (genital herpes). I learned this in 1984, when I was 39. I've been fortunate to get only one or two outbreaks per year. Now, I'm in my late 60s and wonder if I should or should not get a shingles shot. Could you help me make a decision?

— G.F.

Dear G.F.: That's an easy one. You should get the shingles shot.

Herpes simplex virus, both type I (usually in the mouth) and type II (usually genital), are related to the virus that causes shingles, Varicella-Zoster, another virus in the herpes family. But having HSV doesn't protect you from getting shingles, and the shingles vaccine doesn't affect the frequency of HSV outbreaks.

Shingles is common and can be very painful and even debilitating, especially in the elderly, and the vaccine reduces your chances of getting shingles, but even if you do get it, the vaccine reduces the duration and intensity of pain.

You can get the shingles vaccine at many pharmacies; most doctors don't keep it in their offices, since it has to be stored under special conditions.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 25). Your endeavors will be supported by friends and family because you are loved, but also because of the good you do in the world. You'll be fixing up a property in November. January features a creative breakthrough and a new way to earn money. March brings a bit of fame. Aquarius and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 2, 31, 39 and 18.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You don't mean to mislead people, but sometimes you get too ambitious with your promises. Your fortunes will amplify as you work to eliminate any discrepancies between what you say and what you do.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Many try to close deals and make sales, but few will do so as consistently as you. Your secret weapon is that you stick with the winning formula, refusing to veer from it for any reason.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You'll be among a diverse group of helpful, loquacious individuals. A quality discussion will ensue. Every opinion will be worth hearing regardless of whether or not you agree with it.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Silence is a basic need of yours and one that has rarely been met given the demands of your schedule lately. There's something you need to let go of in order to make room for silence.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). There are events that you look forward to, and then there are events, such as dental appointments and the like, that you look forward to being done with. This is the ideal day to put the latter type on the schedule.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You aim to give credit where it's due. When you're not sure, you'd rather err on the side of generosity. But be careful. Undeserved praise and accolades are likely to spoil whomever they are bestowed upon.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Because you like others to feel comfortable around you, you'll be tempted to agree with them in word and deed even while inwardly disagreeing. Neutrality would be a better stance — and one you might find surprisingly easy to take.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). If you don't feel passion for your job today, no worries. You can still find success by putting your efforts behind the next right move. A mentor will tell you exactly which move that is.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Family or close friends may need money from you. If you decide to lend it, don't expect to get it back. Mentally write it off as a gift. Any amount that you are repaid will be a bonus.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You can always make more money, but finding more time is tricky. That's why time is your most valuable commodity. With this in mind, you may change your approach to a project.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your success depends on specialization. You know what you're really good at, and it takes too long to learn everything else. Consult the experts, and get quick results.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). If you feel lost, don't be in too big of a rush to get found. Just because you don't know where you are doesn't mean you're nowhere. Not knowing the name of a place doesn't mean it doesn't exist.

Celebrating young people's achievements, creativity and vision

Spooky fun

Scouts' haunted trail open this weekend

By Anna Mayo
Gleaner Jr. staff

Every year around this time, a multitude of haunted houses, trails, woods and more pop up all over the place. These types of places have become a tradition for many people during the Halloween season.

And this year, Holy Name Boy Scout Troop 50 has decided to start their own Halloween tradition of presenting the Haunted Woods Trick-or-Treat Trail.

This Friday and Saturday at St. Margaret Chapel, 685 Watson Lane, Troop 50 has created a haunted trail about a quarter-mile long that goes through the woods behind the chapel. The trail will be open from 4 to 9 p.m. both Friday and Saturday with the cost being $5 per person. Chili, hot dogs and sodas will also be sold.

The Scout group of about 22 boys and multiple Scout leaders started planning the fundraiser nearly a year ago when a group from the Troop 50 Scouts went to visit a haunted woods run by St. Agnes Church in Union County.

"On the way back, we started talking about doing our own at St. Margaret's," explained chief fundraiser and treasurer of the Holy Name Scouts, John Marshall. "We really wanted to do a big fundraiser so we wouldn't have to do so many little ones, and this seemed like it would be a good idea. Besides, Tracy Benson (fellow Scout leader and quartermaster for the troop) had all the props we would really need."

Benson agreed, "I had all the stuff from doing haunted trails before. We had even done a short, little one for Pack 50's Cub Scouts and they seemed to really enjoy it."

Once the idea was in place, steps had to be taken to get everything organized and together. As Benson put it, "We made a plan, mapped everything out, followed the directions we had previously made, and got everybody involved."

Of course, it required a bit more work than that. Alan Herdegen, scoutmaster of Troop 50, said in reference to their preparations, "We had several meetings, constructed a map, gathered up all the props, and did a practice run."

That practice run seems to be the highlight for everyone who's been working on this fundraiser so far. This past Saturday, the troop and its leaders came out and did a run-through, setting up the entire trail complete with graveyards, skeletons, goblins, witches and ghouls. Then they had volunteers go through, and the boys did their best to try and scare them.

However, this trail isn't necessarily out to scare you. "It's spooky but not too scary," Herdegen said. "Our target range is from 5 to about 15."

And those kids who do come out are sure to enjoy their time in the haunted woods, but why did the Scouts decide to do this as their next fundraiser? After all, a lot of manpower and meetings designing the trail went into it.

"Basically we're trying to do a fundraiser that's not only fun for the kids that come, but also fun for the boys where they can really get involved," Herdegen stated.

The Boy Scouts of Holy Name really have stepped up to the plate, too, making sure that everything is ready to go this weekend. Alex Wheeler, 11, summed it up, as "We've mainly been setting up and preparing."

Will Gibson, 11, and Corey Wilson, 12, went into a little more detail. "I've been digging a lot of graves," said Gibson.

Wilson added, "I've been working on scaring people."

And all the boys will assure you they're not just doing it to help the troop out — although it's something they are well aware of. Corey Benson, 12, said, "I thought it'd be a lot of fun, too."

But why should others come besides the obvious reason to help raise money for Scouts? Wilson stated simply, "People should come out because they'll have a lot of fun."

And as Corey Benson added, "Besides, who doesn't like getting scared?"

Smelling trouble

Tree-climbing exercise becomes scary for Woody

EDITOR'S NOTE: This 10-part Newspaper in Education chapter series titled "Unleashed: A Kentucky Adventure" was written by Kentucky author Leigh Anne Florence and illustrated by Kentucky artist Chris Ware. The stories feature the adventures of Kentucky's famous dachshund, Woody, and his sister, Chloe.

Chapter 7

When I saw, "Welcome to California," my heart stopped. "Dad, I'm sorry! I read the directions wrong. Surely Doc Albert didn't want us in California!"

"Relax," Dad said, laughing. "We aren't in the state of California; we're in California, Kentucky, a city in Campbell County that has about 86 people – much different from the Golden State."

After arriving in California, our new trainer, Rex, met us with a warm, friendly smile. When Rex informed us of our activity, our mouths dropped.

"Mr. Rex," I said respectfully, "you realize we're wiener dogs, not kitty cats, don't you?"

"Yes, Woody," Rex replied, "but thanks for explaining."

"I agree with Woody," Mom said with a laugh. "I've never heard of such a thing."

"Tree climbing is a recreational activity consisting of climbing and moving around the upper part, or crown, of trees," Rex explained. "It began around 1980 and has become a popular adventure sport. It's great exercise, works your muscles and gets you in touch with nature. A man from Louisville named Todd Smith climbed a tree every day for three years!"

"Unbelievable," Chloe commented. "But can't we fall out of a tree?"

"Smart girl," Rex said. "When you tree-climb, you have a guide, are hooked up to a harness, and have gloves and helmets and protective equipment. The guide ensures the tree is safe. If the tree has dead branches or other problems, it could be very dangerous. You should never climb a tree without a guide or protective equipment — unless you're a cat."

As we prepared, Rex explained that California, Kentucky, had the No. 1 tree-climbing company in the world. Once again, my Kentucky goose bumps grew large.

After we were snapped and fastened and tied, and wearing as much gear as an astronaut, Mr. Rex explained the techniques and rules. "The first concern is for your safety. The second concern is for the tree's safety."

I never thought anything would be as scary as standing at the top of the Red River Gorge getting ready to zip-line, but standing at the bottom of the tree looking up was just as scary.

"OK, Woody, let's get you in the tree," Rex said. I breathed deeply, threw the rope over the limb and tried to pull myself into the tree. Just like with Chester, I looked like a yo-yo. Finally, Mr. Rex lifted me in the tree. I was embarrassed until he had to do the same for Chloe. Mom and Dad got in the tree without Mr. Rex's help.

"This is incredible!" Dad exclaimed as he viewed his surroundings. At first it was scary to look around, but all the beautiful things in nature helped us relax. After several minutes in the tree, we began moving from branch to branch — albeit very carefully and slowly.

"Look Woody," Chloe said, pointing to the gray squirrel scampering around the base of the tree. We saw a cardinal perched on a limb in the tree next to us.

While we carefully went from branch to branch, I noticed a hole.

"It's a woodpecker's hole," Mom explained. "Woodpeckers have strong bills. They use them for drilling holes in trees. Then they use their long sticky tongues to remove insects and larvae to eat."

The thought of eating made my tummy growl. I couldn't imagine eating insects, but up until a few days ago I couldn't imagine zip-lining or horseback riding. If a woodpecker enjoyed a snack of insects, so could a wiener dog.

I put my nose in the hole and stuck out my tongue. I couldn't taste anything. I moved my nose in a little further.

Still nothing. I turned my nose a little to the left and wedged it a tiny bit further and stuck out my tongue again. Bingo. I got a tiny taste of something sticky and sweet.

It didn't compare to ice cream, but it was better than spinach. I couldn't wait to tell Chloe. But when I tried to pull my head from the hole, it wouldn't budge. I moved around a bit to try to loosen my nose — still nothing.

I was up in a tree with my nose stuck in a woodpecker hole. Even with my nose stuck in a hole, I smelled trouble.

Google cameras map popular Grand Canyon trails

The Associated Press

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz. – Google and its street-view cameras already have taken users to narrow cobblestone alleys in Spain using a tricycle, inside the Smithsonian with a push cart and to British Columbia's snow-covered slopes by snowmobile.

The search giant now has brought its all-seeing eyes — mounted for the first time on a backpack — down into the Grand Canyon, showcasing the attraction's most popular hiking trails on the South Rim and other walkways.

It's the latest evolution in mapping technology for the Mountain View, Calif., company, which has used a rosette of cameras to photograph thousands of cities and towns in dozens of countries for its Street View feature. With a click of the mouse, Internet users are transported virtually for a 360-degree view of locales they may have read about only in tourist books and seen in flat, 2-D images.

"Any of these sort of iconic, cultural, historical locations that are not accessible by road is where we want to go," said Ryan Falor, product manager at Google.

Google announced the trekker earlier this year but made its first official collection of data this week at the Grand Canyon.

The backpacks aren't ready for volunteer use, but Google has said it wants to deploy them at national forests, to the narrow streets of Venice, Mount Everest and to ancient ruins and castles.

The move to capture the Grand Canyon comes after Apple chose to drop Google Maps from its mobile operating systems and opted to use its own mapping program that was derided for, among other things, poor directions and missing towns.

Google launched its Street View feature in 2007 and has expanded from 5 U.S. cities to more than 3,000 in 43 countries. Google teams and volunteers have covered more than 5 million miles with the Street View vehicles on a scale that other companies haven't approached, said Mike Dobson, president of Telemapics, a company that monitors mapping efforts.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 25, the 299th day of 2012. There are 67 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 25, 1962, in a dramatic confrontation before the U.N. Security Council, U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson II demanded that Soviet Ambassador Valerian Zorin confirm or deny the existence of Soviet-built missile bases in Cuba; when Zorin declined to respond, Stevenson said he was prepared to wait "until hell freezes over" for an answer. Stevenson then presented photographic evidence of the bases to the Council.

On this date:

In 1912, Country comedian Minnie Pearl was born Sarah Ophelia Colley in Centerville, Tenn.

In 1957, mob boss Albert Anastasia of "Murder Inc." notoriety was shot to death by masked gunmen in a barber shop inside the Park Sheraton Hotel in New York.

In 1962, American author John Steinbeck was named winner of the Nobel Prize in literature.

In 1982, the situation comedy "Newhart," starring Bob Newhart as a Vermont innkeeper, premiered on CBS.

In 1992, Grammy-winning singer-songwriter Roger Miller, 56, died in Los Angeles.

Ten years ago: Actor Richard Harris died in London at age 72.

One year ago: Deposed Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, his son Muatassim and former Defense Minister Abu Bakr Younis were buried at dawn in a secret location, five days after Gadhafi was slain by revolutionary fighters.

Think about it

"You can tell the size of a man by the size of the thing that makes him mad." — Adlai E. Stevenson II, American statesman (1900-1965).
